

Background

Islam provides the basic guidance in all fields of human life. Human civilization with all of its activities keeps developing. Islamic law is currently faced with the contemporary issues that get more complex. Reactualization of Islamic law needs to be studied intensively, comprehensively, and instantaneously as an effort of development. Muamalat field is basically open and accommodating provided that it is based on Sharia principle for the welfare. Existence of the Islamic law that is contextual (dynamic) is required to respond the challenge of age.

Islam positions every interaction line of human life to be connected with vertical dimension as a means of worship. Qur'an and Hadith place human being on an honorable position. Values of justice, brotherhood, caring for each other, and respect on human dignity are some of fundamental values carried consistently in Islam. Islamic law as a system needs to be comprehensively understood. Dynamization of the Islamic law is not only in Indonesia, but also in many countries. The development must be welcomed positively, so Islamic law can be recognized and accepted more expansively.

Study on Islamic law, muamalat field in particular, in the age of globalization and information disclosure cannot be separated from each other. Critical study by involving several other disciplines that are dialogic will be highly required. Modernity with various innovations cannot be approached only with an abstract theoretical, but it needs to be set and analyzed methodologically using interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary approaches. Noble Islamic values will be constantly capable of communicating and being externalized objectively to be comprehensively accepted.

Muamalat includes all aspects related to human life in the fields of economy, politic, social life, and culture. Interaction among these fields basically reflects interaction between divinity and humanity. Islam suggests the followers to be advanced and educated. Intensive study about Sharia preference and implementation in certain fields will be constantly required, along with the advancement of science, technology, and several fields of human life that rapidly grows. Relevance of the Islamic law study needs to be directed as an effort to solve several needs and contextual issues.
